

STEAMER DASHING TO PIECES; CREW IN DANGER

Cadiz, Spain, March 27.—60 men of crew of British steamer Trestburg, pounding to pieces near Cape Spartel on Moroccan coast, are in grave danger today. Trestburg, a 6,200 ton steamer, is believed about to break in two less than half a mile off shore.

British destroyers and the French cruiser Friant are spending by Trestburg, but since dawn the sea has been running so high that the rescue vessels have been unable to approach the steamer.

LOCATE SUBMARINE—NO HOPE FOR CREW OF TWENTY-ONE

Honolulu, March 27.—The missing submarine F-4, located by grappling irons late yesterday 300 feet beneath the waves, will probably be brought up today.

Naval construction experts and divers say it is futile to hold hopes for the lives of the 2 officers and 19 men.

The depth to which the vessel sunk is now accepted as the direct cause of the first American submarine disaster. Enormous water pressure at 300 feet, it is regarded certain, crushed in her sides like an egg shell.

FERRY HAS SUBWAY PLAN

Montague Ferry, commissioner of public service, today divulged his plan for subwayizing all elevated and most surface lines through the loop. He proposes double-decked subways that would extend from as far north as Lawrence av., to as far south as 23rd st., and into which the elevated and surface cars would dip. The system would touch every railroad station except the B. & O. It would cost $50,000,000.

CABARET SINGER SAYS TROUT IS AN OLD FRIEND

The Rev. I. B. Trout, whose abrupt resignation as pastor of the Brethren church at Lanark, Ill., and editor of the Teachers' Monthly, stirred the church world, received another raking from the object of his attempts to "elevate"—Florence Maxwell.

"Babe" Maxwell, as she is called, claims that the pastor who says he was seeking matter for his book on sociology, was a "man about town" in the south saloons and cafes, where he was known as Dr. N. R. Bennett, "the Goat."

Letters galore from "Dr. Bennett," which are of a loving nature, she shows, and she claims that "the doctor" made love to her upon the grounds that he was a rich bachelor. His story about elevating her and buying clothes have angered her parents, who live at 3645 Grand blvd., and they threaten legal action against the former pastor.

SAMUEL GOMPERS TO BOYS

"Don't think that because you have finished your apprenticeships that you are finished carpenters," advised Pres. Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor before a class of boy students at the Lane Technical high school. "Go out now with the intention of mastering the trade."

"Be true to your union, to yourselves, your country and our flag. If you follow these principals you will be honored by generations to come."

"Don't look for an easy job," Mr. Gompers advised the graduates. "I believe there never was a more independent workman that I was during the quarter of a century that I served at my trade, but I always recognized my employer and his position, although none was quicked than I to resent a wrong or unjust act. But in the shop I never did a piece of work, I believe, that I did not try to do better than the last similar piece I had attempted."
